Beauty and the Beast

Before Beauty's father leaves the castle the Beast talks to him.

'I'm not bad,' says the Beast. 'Go back to your bedroom. There is a big chest <sup>1</sup> there. Fill it with everything you want and it is yours.'

Beauty's father fills the chest with a lot of gold. Then he gets on his horse and goes home. When he is at home he gives the rose to Beauty.

'Take this rose, Beauty,' he says sadly. 'Let me tell you about my terrible adventure.'

He tells his children about the empty ship in the port, the castle in the forest and the Beast.

Rosalind and Hortensia are angry with Beauty. They say, 'Father must die because you like roses, Beauty!'

'No,' says Beauty, 'father is not going to die. I'm going to the Beast's castle!'

'No, dear sister,' say her three brothers. 'We're going to his castle and we're going to kill him!'

'No, that's not possible,' says their father. 'The Beast is very big and strong. I'm old – I must go and die.'

But Beauty does not agree. She decides <sup>2</sup> to go to the Beast's castle.

'No, father,' she says, 'you must not go. I want to go!'

'Never, my dear Beauty!' says her father.

Beauty's father looks at the Beast and then at his daughter.

'Oh, Beauty,' he says, 'please go home! Let me stay here!'

'No, father,' says Beauty. 'We must be brave. We're both tired – let's go and sleep now. Tomorrow morning you can go home to my brothers and sisters.'
